

Joint Institutes Colloquium

MPI for Social Anthropology and Institute for Social and Cultural Anthropology, MLU

Summer Semester 2016

Organisers: Sung-Joon Park, Sandra Calkins, Ronn Müller, Sylvia Terpe

Boundaries, Bodies, and Politics: the 'refugee crisis' and the new Europe

Tragic scenes of hundreds of refugees cramped onto too small boats, washing up on Mediterranean coasts, and masses camping near borders, headed to cities in central Europe, have come to stand for the current "refugee crisis". This mass migration of refugees has raised fundamental debates about what holds Europe together – morally, politically, legally and historically. These debates are discussed controversially while national governments design their own piecemeal answers to inhibit, displace or absorb the moving masses as quickly as possible. Speaking of a refugee crisis should not only problematize the integration of refugees but also call attention to the humanitarian disasters unfolding in EU border regions as well as to more distant wars and catastrophes. More importantly, the current migratory momentum has to be considered to be at least coproduced by a technocratic apparatus, established in over 30 years of EU policy making, and put in place primarily to discern good from bad immigration. This apparatus promotes core values, such as freedom of movement and security, by implementing a restrictive and increasingly techno-scientific regime of border control. Recent events have shown that refugees act as political subjects regardless of their social and political status. They may claim recognition and rights while eschewing state institutions. This "migrant citizenship" indicates a transformation of the established political category of citizenship that is shaping border regimes. We bring together academics to discuss the ways boundaries and bodies have been made and remade in recent decades through this apparatus, comprising international laws on asylum, human rights, national and European immigration policies, technologies of border policing, and new techno-scientific forms of identification (biometrics, forensics etc.). We also invite scholars to present ethnographic material on how fear, insecurity, hope and aspirations for a better life intersect in these processes of boundary un/making, and to reflect on the political implications of the current mass immigration on the construction of Europe – or, shall we say, multiple Europes?

12.04.2016 | Heidrun Friese | TU Chemnitz, Germany
Limits of Hospitality

26.04.2016 | Ludger Pries | University of Bochum, Germany
The European Refugee Crisis – Ugly Side of the 'European Space of Justice, Freedom and Security' or 'Common European Asylum System' in the Making?

10.05.2016 | Dawn Chatty | University of Oxford, UK
Caught between a Rock and a Hard Place: understanding perceptions and aspirations among hosts, practitioners, and guests in Turkey, Lebanon and Jordan

17.05.2016 | Serhat Karakayali | Humboldt University, Berlin, Germany
Politics of Hospitality from Below

07.06.2016 | Amade M'charek | University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands
Moving Bodies, Shifting Boundaries: the 'refugee crisis' and the European border management regime

21.06.2016 | Åsa Wettergren | University of Gothenburg, Sweden
National Emotive-Cognitive Processes of Closed Borders: ontological security and the collective emotion work of denied empathy

05.07.2016 | Flüchtlingskrise oder Krise der Verwaltung? Eine Diskussionsrunde zur gegenwärtigen Lage

Venue: Historischer Hörsaal, Löwengebäude, Universitätsplatz 11, 06108 Halle

Walter Bartl | Institute of Sociology, MLU Halle-Wittenberg

Matthias Kaufmann | Chair of Ethics, MLU Halle-Wittenberg

Winfried Kluth | Chair of Public Law, MLU Halle-Wittenberg

Ronn Müller | Institute for Social and Cultural Anthropology, MLU Halle-Wittenberg

Reinhold Sackmann | Chair of Social Structure Analysis, MLU Halle-Wittenberg

Tuesdays 16:15–18:00 | Main Seminar Room
Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology
Advokatenweg 36 | 06114 Halle | www.eth.mpg.de

Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology

Institute for Social and Cultural Anthropology
Martin Luther University Halle-Wittenberg